

THEY SURRENDER TO THE BULGARS

Two Divisions Of Turk Reserves Trapped Near Adrianople

Besiegers Tightening Lines--Last Important Town In The Province Of Albania Reduced By Servian Arms--Serbs Send Insulting Message To Austria On Their Occupation Of A Port On The Adriatic Sea--Characteristics Of The Turkish Soldiers

London, Nov. 30.—Two divisions of Turkish reserves surrendered to the Bulgars near the little village of Marhamit, between the ports of Dedeağatch, on the Aegean, and Demetika, on the railroad line to the north. Dedeagatch is but a short distance south-west of Adrianople, around which the Bulgarian and Serb besiegers are steadily tightening their lines. The announcement of the surrender of the Turkish troops comes from Sofia.

There is rejoicing in Belgrade over the fact that Dibra, the last important town in Albania, has fallen to Servian arms. The capture of Dibra and the peaceful occupation of Durazzo, on the Adriatic, from which there may yet come fighting with Austria, present the two contrasting characteristics of the Turk's fighting men in this war.

At Dibra the troops were worn by days of hand-to-hand fighting. They had been beaten at Uakub, Salonica and Monastir. They had seen their generals kill themselves on the field of battle and their officers flee, yet they could still fight rather than surrender when the Serbs came up to them at Dibra. At Durazzo, on the other hand, there was a fresh garrison, well provisioned, which surrendered without firing a shot. The Serbs swarmed into the city and their general sent a telegram, a direct slap at Austria: "We now have occupied Durazzo for perpetuity."

RULING OF THE COURT

Is Of Material Assistance To Cetone

Evidence of Plot Ruled Out In the Bribery Case.

STATE ATTORNEYS ARE UPSET

Claim Common Pleas Judge Has Overruled the Supreme Court and Will Carry Up Exceptions Immediately. Representative Nye Repeats Confession, Corroborating Detective Smiley and the Dictagraph.

Columbus, O., Nov. 30.—The two state attorneys in the Cetone bribery case are much exercised over a ruling of Judge Evans, who is sitting in the case.

According to the judge's decision the state will not be permitted to show that accused legislators, particularly Senators Huffman and Cetone and Rodney J. Diegel, senate sergeant-at-arms, entered into a conspiracy immediately after the bribery exposure to fix up a line of defense whereby they hoped to be able to combat prosecution successfully.

The trouble started when the state placed Senator William E. Haas of Delaware on the stand to testify as to the talks Huffman, Cetone and Diegel had with him relative to going to Senator Huffman's room at the Virginia hotel and preparing a defense.

Because Senator Cetone did not mention Diegel's name when Senator Haas says Cetone asked him if he were going to Huffman's room, counsel for the defense contended that there was no evidence of a conspiracy, as Senator Cetone might have wanted Senator Haas to go to the hotel room to talk about the weather or any other subject having no connection with the bribery exposure. Judge Evans held with them.

State attorneys contended that the supreme court had included Senator Cetone in its ruling on the question just as much as it included Senator Huffman, because the two senators' names were used together jointly in the decision, which had referred to "them all" and, together with Diegel, as "all three."

The state also contended that Cetone's question to Senator Haas, "Are you going down to Huffman's room?" sufficiently implied that Senator Cetone knew that Senator Haas had been acquainted with the purpose for which his presence was wanted. The state attorneys will carry up exceptions at once.

Nye's Testimony. Those who had expected Senator Cetone's counsel to give Representative George B. Nye of Pike county, who recently confessed to having accepted a bribe from Burns detectives and that his annual legislative graft amounted to $10,000, a severe cross-examination, were fooled. They did not attempt to cross-examine him on his testimony, but asked him if he had not confessed, and if the reason he was testifying for the state was because he had been promised immunity. Nye admitted he had expected clemency.

When called for direct examination, Nye kept the court waiting a few minutes while he brushed his hair. He seemed nervous when he took the stand. The direct examination was brief. He identified both Cetone and Smiley, and then Turner asked: "Did you see Smiley and Cetone together on the evening of April 27?" Nye replied that he did and that it was in Smiley's room at the Chittenden hotel between 5 and 6 o'clock. He said Cetone and Smiley were in the room when he arrived and that later Diegel and Huffman came in.

"What did you do then?" asked the prosecutor.

"I immediately left," answered Nye.

Nye's testimony is corroborative of that given by Detective Smiley and the dictagraph stenographer.

Salmon Steaks. Take thick slices of salmon and a baking pan large enough to hold them in single layer. For each slice use one tablespoonful of chopped onion, one of chopped parsley and one of chopped celery or of dried celery leaves. Sprinkle these over the bottom of the pan. Salt and pepper both sides of the salmon slices and lay them in the pan. Dot them liberally with butter and pour a very little hot water into the pan. Bake in a quick oven twenty-five to thirty-five minutes, at the last browning on the top grate. Lift out carefully on a hot platter. Just a little moist dressing should be left in the pan. Take this out, spread it on the slices and serve.

Creamed Oysters. Put one pint of oysters into one pint of cold water. Put one pint of cream in a double boiler over fire. When it gets foamy it is hot enough. Put one tablespoonful of butter into a saucepan, stir over fire until hot, but not brown; then stir in gradually one tablespoonful of flour and pour on cream, a little at a time, and stir until smooth. Season with salt, pepper and a small pinch of mace. Add oysters after draining and let remain over fire until the edges are curled. When ready to use warm the patties and put two tablespoonfuls of oysters in each patty.

Holiday Fruit Punch. Use as many different fruits as desired, sliced lemon, pineapples, white grapes cut in halves and seeded, oranges, preserved cherries, and put in a punch bowl with a quart of plain or charged water, the juice of four lemons, two oranges and a sugar syrup made by cooking together a pound of sugar and a pint of water. Freshly brewed tea may be added with advantage to any fruit punch, particularly when mineral waters are used. Decorate the rim of the punch bowl with small clusters of grapes and set the bowl on a mat of grape leaves.
